INTRODUCTION

- ▶ COVID-19 was first reported in Wuhan, China, and subsequently spread worldwide. The coronavirus was officially named severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) by the International Committee on Taxonomy of Viruses based on genetic analysis.
- ▶ Researchers have now discovered data that supports the animal origin of the virus, indicating that Omicron's most likely initial host was a monkey and that it may have transformed into Omicron variants.
- ▶ Omicron mutations in the spike protein, they discovered, made the virus particles twice as infectious as those with the ancestral spike protein.
